If you ran RedEye

We promised that if you participated with RedEye's new Twitter feature that we'd reward you by printing some of your comments. For Monday, we asked you to help us choose stories for RedEye by telling us what's important and newsworthy to you. Here's what you had to say, followed by RedEye's responses.

sevyann7s not voting? Why? What would get you to vote?

@redeyeichicago replies: Terrific question. If you aren't voting, we'd love to know why and what would get you to do so. Go to twitter.com/redeyeichicago and let us know.

KBarrick Voter fraud: What's out there (i.e. VOTING MACHINES!!!) and what to look out for.

@redeyeichicago replies: The Associated Press reports that voter fraud is rare in the U.S., according to a 2007 report by the nonpartisan Brennan Center for Justice at the New York University School of Law. It says most problems were caused by things like technological glitches, clerical errors or voter/election official error.

dylanorion What's going on with early voting? How is the turnout?

@redeyeichicago replies: According to the AP, about a third of the electorate is expected to vote early this year, thanks to expanded early voting provisions and fewer restrictions on absentee voting.

drinkbourbon What's on my mind is fall fashion. Sweater season is upon us. Trying to decide between buying shoes or cologne. So pricey.

@redeyeichicago replies: In Saturday's RedEye, our staff asked fashion guru Clinton Kelly to discuss cool winter trends. You'll find it on Page 17 in the Weekend Edition.

Joe Wurzelbacher is followed by a flock of reporters Thursday afternoon as he walks to a neighbor's home in Holland, Ohio. Wurzelbacher, known as "Joe the Plumber," criticized the news media Saturday for digging into his personal life rather than focusing on politics. AP

Just an average Joe

'Joe the Plumber' strikes back at media

Associated Press

NEW YORK "Joe the Plumber" is lashing out at the media for analyzing his personal life since he suddenly became a focal point of the presidential race last week.

Joe Wurzelbacher, a plumber from Holland, Ohio, told Mike Huckabee on his Fox News talk show Saturday that he is upset by the attention and has been unable to work with reporters crowded on his front lawn.

"The media's worried about whether I've paid my taxes, they're worried about any number of silly things that have nothing to do with America," Wurzelbacher told the former Republican presidential hopeful on his show, "Huckabee."

Wurzelbacher said he felt terrible after reading some of the criticism of himself posted online.

"I felt about that small," he said. "I mean I really did."

Republican presidential candidate John McCain has been portraying Wurzelbacher as emblematic of people with concerns about Obama's tax plans.

Wurzelbacher became famous after he met Obama and said the Democrat's tax proposal could keep him from buying the two-man plumbing company where he works. However, reports of Wurzelbacher's annual earnings suggest he would receive a tax cut rather than an increase under Obama's plan.

"You know, I am a plumber," Wurzelbacher said. "Just a plumber."

Wurzelbacher said he agreed to appear on the show after he received phone calls from friends serving in the military who voiced their support.

"You know, when you can't ask a question of your leaders anymore, that gets scary," he said.

Colin Powell breaks rank to endorse Obama

WASHINGTON Colin Powell, a Republican who was President Bush's first secretary of state, endorsed Democrat Barack Obama for president Sunday and criticized the tone of Republican John McCain's campaign.

The former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff said either candidate, both of them senators, is qualified to be commander in chief. But he said Obama is better suited to handle the nation's economic problems as well as help improve its standing in the world.

"It isn't easy for me to disappoint Sen. McCain in the way that I have this morning, and I regret that," Powell, interviewed on NBC's "Meet the Press," said of his longtime friend, the Arizona senator.

But, he added: "I think we need a transformational figure. I think we need a president who is a generational change and that's why I'm supporting Barack Obama, not out of any lack of respect or admiration for Sen. John McCain."

Asked whether Powell's endorsement would undercut his campaign's assertion that Obama is not ready to lead, McCain said: "Well, again, we have a very, we have a respectful disagreement, and I think the American people will pay close attention to our message for the future and keeping America secure."

Obama called Powell to thank him for the endorsement, Obama spokesman Robert Gibbs said.

'The Hills' are alive in Chicago

The drama of "The Hills" hit Chicago on Friday night at two separate nightclubs.

Brody Jenner made an appearance at Enclave and Heidi Montag, with boyfriend Spencer Pratt by her side, attended a breast cancer awareness event at Manor. Surprisingly, there was more drama swirling around Jenner than Speidi!

At Enclave there were rumors circling around Jenner that he's off the market. However, he told people there that even though he loves his girlfriend very much, he is not engaged. When people asked him about reports from last week about a reunion between Lauren Conrad and Montag, he wouldn't talk about it.

Meanwhile, across town Montag and Pratt were working the room at the charity event. They talked to their fans, took photos with them and were very polite.

Montag and Pratt left when the nightclub closed and went back to their room at the Sutton Place Hotel. They told people at the club they wanted to get some Windy City shopping in before their flight Saturday.

Weisz gets candid

Rachel Weisz sparkled on the red carpet Thursday night at the Harris Theater for the premiere of her new flick, "The Brothers Bloom," part of opening night of the Chicago International Film Festival.

Weisz posed for photos with director Rian Johnson and took some questions from my intern Kristen Lepore about the comedy, which also stars Mark Ruffalo and Adrien Brody.

What attracted you to this role?

Just to be funny. To do something lighter and funny, not so serious and dramatic.

What was it like working with actors like Mark Ruffalo and Adrien Brody?

Great. They are really fantastic actors. They're not really comedians, they're actors. But they were really, really funny in the movie.

How about working with Rian Johnson?

He's really a sweetheart. He loves what he does and he said it was really important for him to have a lot of fun making it.

How do you stay in such good shape?

A lot of it is running after my 2 1/2-year-old.

Chicago lawyers find TV guilty of excess drama

By Leonor Vivanco
REDEYE

On any given day at the Cook County criminal courthouse, judges preside over hundreds of cases: felony DUI, possession of controlled substances, aggravated assault and murder—just to name a few.

Some defendants are being tried before a judge or jury. Others, wearing tan jumpsuits, file into the large, chilly and dreary courtrooms for more routine proceedings—to hear judges' rulings on motions, get a new court date, or agree to plea bargains in open court.

If you're a fan of TV's prime-time legal dramas—centered on trials, ethically challenged attorneys and high drama—you might not recognize the place.

Here, the exchanges between prosecutors and defense attorneys are hardly explosive. Spectators sitting on the nicked, dark wooden benches in the courtrooms are mainly family members.

Meanwhile, millions more are sitting on their couches at home, fascinated by the proliferating prime-time legal dramas on TV. These shows range from veterans—"Law & Order" debuted in 1990, while "Boston Legal" finishes its five-year run this season—to newcomers, including "Damages" and "Eli Stone," whose second season premiered last week. Just last month, "Raising the Bar" joined the court TV club.

While such shows are popular—"Law & Order" and its "Special Victims" spinoff averaged 9 million viewers last year, according to Nielsen Media Research—and entertaining, they're also far-fetched. Chicago lawyers say the shows, often created or written by lawyers, feature exaggerated and highly dramatic characters, shorten the legal process of a trial

The 'CSI' effect

Crime-related dramas are "very exciting, but they don't compare to the day-to-day activities of people working in these areas. What is more interesting in some ways, there's evidence and new research that shows they're beginning to create expectations among jurors," said Laura Beth Nielsen, director of legal studies at Northwestern University.

She referred to what has been dubbed the "CSI effect," the idea that watching programs like "CSI" causes jurors to acquit defendants when no scientific evidence is presented. A 2006 survey of more than 1,000 people summoned to jury duty in Michigan showed many potential jurors expect scientific evidence to be presented, but it was not a prerequisite in rendering a guilty verdict in most criminal case scenarios. L.V.

that could take years down to an hour and capture the highly unlikely moment when people shockingly confess on the stand.

"Boston Legal," for example, is mostly over the top, said Darryl Goldberg, 30, a criminal defense attorney who lives downtown.

He recalled an episode in which Alan Shore, played by James Spader, goes before the Supreme Court and criticizes the justices.

"It would never happen in a million years. He'd be held in contempt and he'd be wearing a jumpsuit so fast because all he did was go on a political tirade against conservative members of the court," said Goldberg, a partner at Meczysk Goldberg.

"Law & Order" doesn't portray the legal system accurately either, he said, especially when it comes to timing.

"Someone will get arrested and a day later they're already picking a jury and the case is going to trial and a case is decided within a two-day period. You wouldn't even get to an indictment in two days," Goldberg said.

What seems to be missing in these dramas are the long hours spent taking care of paperwork, interviewing witnesses and preparing cases, he said.

"They sensationalize the trial work. Every trial lawyer loves going to trial. But at the same time they don't show a lot of behind-the-scenes stuff," Goldberg said.

In the real world, fact-gathering and trial preparation take up most of lawyers' time, said Adam Bonin, 35, a University of Chicago law school graduate who works in Philadelphia as a civil litigator.

"Any show that has lawyers in court a lot is lying," said Bonin, who started a pop culture blog called A List of Things Thrown Five Minutes Ago.

An overwhelming majority of cases—civil or criminal—are settled out of court or plea-bargained, he said.

Despite the rising number of court cases, the percentage of cases reaching trial has declined. For example, 1.8 percent of federal cases went to trial in 2002, down from 11 percent in 1962, according to data compiled for the American Bar Association's Vanishing Trials Project. Less than 5 percent of criminal cases were tried in 2002, compared with 15 percent in 1962.

Of course, some shows are meant to be pure entertainment. Remember the unisex bathrooms and dancing baby on "Ally McBeal"? That—like the musical numbers of "Eli Stone"—are unlikely to be seen at law firms.

"When I was in high school and starting to think about a career, it was all about 'L.A. Law.' And it presented such a glamorous courtroom-centered vision of what being a lawyer was like that you couldn't help but want to be one," Bonin said.

"What I do as a lawyer now is very different from that. It's immensely satisfying in different ways, but it's not like what they show you on TV." LIVANCO@TRIBUNE.COM

Court TV

Here's a list of some of the law shows on TV airing now or renewed for an upcoming season:

Damages (2007)

Starring Ted Danson (left), the legal thriller is set in New York and focuses on a class-action lawsuit.

Boston Legal (2004)

The show focuses on a lawyer (James Spader) and his mentor (William Shatner, left) in a chaotic office, pushing the boundaries of law.

Eli Stone (2008)

Eli Stone (Jonny Lee Miller, left) is a lawyer who has visions and may be a prophet. George Michael has appeared, and Katie Holmes will guest star Tuesday.

"There's not a lot of adherence to the rules of evidence on the show, and as they're cross-examining somebody or doing an examination of witnesses, a lot of off-the-cuff comments are made. ... The zingers and one-liners prosecutors and the defense will make (on TV), you're not going to be able to get away with."

On jurors' expectations: "We live in a world of 'CSI' and 'Law & Order' and where we get a real jury and they don't understand that you can't talk the way they do to witnesses and you can't argue with witnesses the way they do" on TV.

On how attorneys compare to their TV counterparts:

"Some litigators I know are like that and can talk off the cuff and are outrageous at what they say and have big personalities. But otherwise most attorneys are much more subdued. ... Some attorneys buy into that style—act like the sky is falling and you'll win."

On being warned about such shows: "At the beginning of my trial advocacy class in law school, the first thing they did was sit us down and explain to us that it was nothing like 'Law & Order' or 'Boston Legal' or 'CSI,' so we have to get that out of our heads."

Brown Line stations showing construction flaws, blemishes

By Jon Hilkevitch
CHICAGO TRIBUNE

CTA officials must be hoping that Brown Line riders hurrying to catch their trains won't pay too much attention to spots where corners were cut at rebuilt stations as the $530 million rehab project enters its final phase.

"The reconstruction has gone very well, no major problems," said Pat Taylor, the transit agency's vice president of facilities maintenance, construction and engineering.

The CTA can take credit for stations that are sleek and larger than the old ones while preserving the original historic station houses. The community artwork adds a nice touch.

But a close inspection reveals design issues, construction flaws and blemishes that customers are noticing as 12 of the 18 Brown Line stations are now completed. Work on the remaining stations is scheduled to wrap up next year.

The new stations, replacing some about 100 years old, are expected to last at least 40 years until the next overhaul.

But there are early signs of rust, due in part to cost-saving decisions to eliminate some of the stainless steel on platform railings, canopy decks and other locations and use galvanized steel instead, Taylor acknowledged.

Splintering already is turning up on some of the new wooden platforms.

Rivets are corroding quickly at the Southport station because contractors used the wrong fasteners on some wind-break panels.

The corrosion will be corrected, along with rust that has formed on metalwork that was welded off-site and assembled at the stations, said Bob Wittmann, CTA general manager of construction and the

CHRISTOPHER BOOKER/TRIBUNE

Brown Line project manager.

Other shortcuts, however, will remain as part of $152 million in belt-tightening. For instance, the CTA economized on painting the elevated structure by reducing the amount of square footage that comes in contact with a paint brush, Wittmann said.

The skimping, done to keep the massive project within budget, will be especially obvious in the months ahead as rain turns to freezing rain and then snow.

The length of overhead protective canopies on the platforms was reduced to the equivalent of two rail cars, instead of four car lengths. But station platforms were extended to accommodate eight-car trains, resulting in more exposed areas on the platforms.

The cutbacks and downsizing all date back to a former CTA president, Frank Kruesi, who ordered major cuts after bids for the Brown Line project came in much higher than engineering estimates.

Ald. Eugene Schuster (47th), who created the Brown Line task force to monitor the CTA during the project, said he hopes to identify future funding to eventually restore some of the items scrapped from the project.

Competition to get into best colleges grows fiercer

Chicago Tribune

In the competition to get into the most selective colleges, some students and their parents are resorting to a tasteless tactic: bashing other applicants.

The letters, mailed to admissions offices, typically arrive without a signature. They say rival applicants cheated on exams or got suspended for underage drinking. Sometimes, they include an unflattering newspaper clipping or a sly suggestion to check out pictures on a student's Facebook page.

At Northwestern University, one letter was written in crayon. "I guess they thought we couldn't trace it if it were in crayon," said Christopher Watson, Northwestern's dean of undergraduate admission. "The grammar was too good to be a little kid. ... We see everything. Nothing shocks us anymore."

College admissions officials said they do not track how many of these letters, calls or e-mails they receive and said they are unsure whether they're getting more of them. But with competition fiercer than ever, and technology making it easier to communicate, several experts said they wouldn't be surprised to see more of this behavior.

"People think if they disadvantage one student, it may advantage theirs," said Stacey Kostell, director of undergraduate admissions at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. She said the university has received anonymously sent newspaper articles about applicants' criminal activities.

Dan Saracino, the University of Notre Dame's director of admissions, said he'll investigate allegations even if they're provided anonymously.

"If the person is saying something that might have some credence, you don't want to dismiss it," he said. "We will contact the student who is being maligned and ask them if they care to respond."

Mabel Freeman, assistant vice president of undergraduate admissions at Ohio State, said it's unfortunate that the efforts are primarily orchestrated by adults.

"It is one more indication of the high anxiety that seems to be out there, the inability of some families to deal with a rejection," Freeman said.

Nation of Islam's Farrakhan discusses 'new beginning'

Farrakhan

Nation of Islam Minister Louis Farrakhan stressed unity among religions, while still preaching a message of black empowerment at a rare public event deemed "a new beginning" for the Chicago-based movement.

In the wide-ranging speech lasting two hours, Farrakhan covered topics including immigration, public schools and morality. He vaguely referred to the presidential election, but he didn't specifically mention any candidates on Sunday.

The 75-year-old addressed the crowd of thousands gathered at the Mosque Maryam on the South Side. The event was a rededication of the historic 1948 structure, which has undergone major renovations since it was purchased by the Nation in 1972.

Farrakhan's speech wraps up a week of events commemorating the 13th anniversary of the Million Man March.

Besides religious leaders of many faiths, hundreds of other visitors were invited by Nation members to attend. They passed through tight security before entering the mosque on Stony Island Avenue or being directed toward huge white tents on the grounds where screens were set up to watch the proceedings.

"The mosque has always been a positive thing for the community, culturally," said Shelton Oliver, 38, as he waited in line. "It's been good for the neighborhood in trying to stop violence, and gangs. It's all positive."

Fire damages Chinatown restaurant

A Chinatown restaurant was damaged Sunday after flames broke out in the eatery's kitchen and spread through the building, officials said. Penang restaurant, 2201 S. Wentworth Ave., was open around 11:40 a.m. when the fire broke out during cooking, spread up the exhaust system of the two-story building and blew through the roof, said Chicago fire department spokesman Joe Roccasalva.

Man who died identified as parolee

A Chicago man who died Saturday after police used a taser gun when he approached them with a homemade knife was identified Sunday as a parolee released from prison just over a week ago, officials said.

An autopsy Sunday by the Cook County medical examiner's office was unable to determine the cause of 39-year-old Homer Taylor's death and said the official results were pending further studies, which can take weeks. Police said it appeared the man ingested narcotics before dying.

Taylor was acting erratic and drinking from an open bottle about 2 p.m. Saturday near North Leclaire Avenue and West Washington Boulevard, police said. As they approached Taylor, he fled, and officers chased him.

"The man was apprehended and became combative with what appeared to be a sharp-edged object, thrashing at officers," Chicago Police Department spokeswoman Monique Bond said. "The subject resisted arrest and was subdued with a taser discharge."

Taylor, who lived in the 300 block of North Central Park Avenue, was released from prison Oct. 10 after being sentenced to two years for convictions on forgery and drug charges, according to public records. Taylor also had several other drug convictions since 1999.

No officers were hurt during the confrontation. The incident was being evaluated by the Independent Police Review Authority.

This many middle school teachers in Chicago could be required to go back to school to get additional training to continue teaching under a plan expected to be approved by the Chicago Board of Education this week. Under the proposal, 6th-, 7th- and 8th-grade teachers would be asked to gain an "endorsement" noting they are qualified for specific subjects at those grade levels, said Xavier Botana, head of elementary education for Chicago Public Schools.

Abducted boy found alive in Las Vegas

1 LAS VEGAS A 6-year-old boy kidnapped from a Las Vegas home by alleged drug dealers posing as policemen has been found alive in a neighborhood northeast of the Las Vegas Strip, police said early Sunday.

The child was “in extremely good condition” and had been taken to University Medical Center in Las Vegas for examination, Las Vegas police Capt. Vincent Cannito said at a news conference. “He is safe and in our custody,” Cannito said. “It’s a blessing this child has been found.”

Cole Puffinburger was recovered at around 10:30 p.m. Saturday after a caller informed detectives about a child walking alone on a street in a middle-class neighborhood of tidy, modest-sized homes about 5 miles from the Las Vegas Strip, Las Vegas police Officer Jay Rivera said.

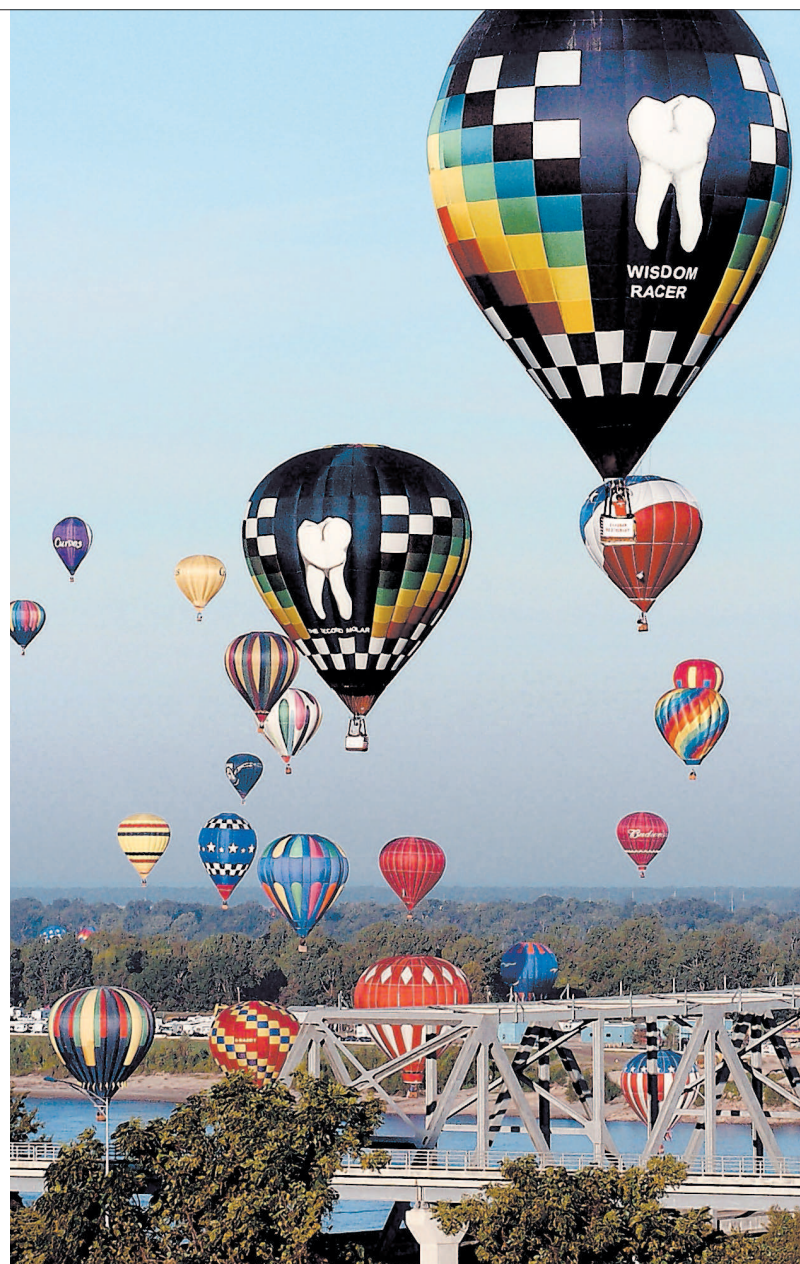

Detectives discovered Cole outside a large Methodist church in the neighborhood. The area was being treated as a crime scene, but police gave no information about how Cole got there or where he had been kept since his Wednesday morning abduction.

The child was kidnapped at gunpoint by men who tied up the boy’s mother and her boyfriend and ransacked their home.

Authorities arrested Cole’s grandfather Clemens Tinnemeyer late Friday in connection with the boy’s disappearance. Police believe that the abductors were Mexican drug dealers and that the kidnapping at gunpoint was a “message” to Tinnemeyer, 51, whom they said may have stolen millions of dollars from dealers.

POINT TAKIN'

BEARS SCORE EARLY, OFTEN IN HOME SHOOTOUT WITH VIKINGS

Associated Press

The last time the Bears scored this many points, Walter Payton was taking handoffs and Mike Ditka was prowling the sideline.

Kyle Orton threw two touchdown passes, special teams chipped in with two more and the Bears hung on for a 48-41 victory over the Minnesota Vikings on Sunday.

The Bears intercepted Gus Frerotte four times even though its injury-riddled secondary was missing starting cornerbacks Nathan Vasher and Charles Tillman along with nickel back Danieal Manning. The Bears also lost star kick returner Devin Hester to a bruised quad in the third quarter, yet still managed to put up their most points since beating Tampa Bay 48-14 at home on Dec. 7, 1986. It was the most points the Bears have allowed in a win, and the total of 89 tied a record set in a 51-38 loss at Baltimore in October 1958.

"We've got a group of guys who are together," Orton said. "It doesn't matter what happens outside that huddle. It's everybody inside the huddle working for a common goal, and we work together very well."

The Bears survived a late push by Minnesota after building a 17-point lead and won even though Adrian Peterson ran for 121 yards and two touchdowns, including a 54-yarder.

BEARS 48, VIKINGS 41

Defense, special teams help Bears hold on to first place in NFC North.

"It feels like we keep killing ourselves," Peterson said. "We put up (439) yards on a pretty good defense."

But it wasn't enough.

Orton completed 21-of-32 passes for 283 yards, including a 51-yard touchdown pass to Marty Booker that made it 41-31 with 2:35 left in the third quarter. Kevin Payne then picked off Frerotte, and after a questionable pass interference call against Vinny Ciurciu on fourth down at the 1, Matt Forte ran it in to extend the Bears' lead to 48-31 in the opening seconds of the fourth.

Minnesota got a 23-yard field goal from Ryan Longwell, and former Bear Bernard Berrian capped a 75-yard drive with a 5-yard touchdown catch that made it a seven-point game with 3 minutes left.

But this time, the Bears hung on.

Tommie Harris sacked Frerotte after Minnesota (3-4) took over at the 25 with just over a minute left following a punt, and rookie Zackary Bowman sealed it with an interception after being elevated from the practice squad during the week.

So instead of bemoaning another lost opportunity, the Bears (4-3) breathed a sigh of relief. They've blown fourth-quarter leads in each of their losses.

"We're not playing very good defense right now," safety Mike Brown said. "Right now, it seems like we're lost, can't find a rhythm."

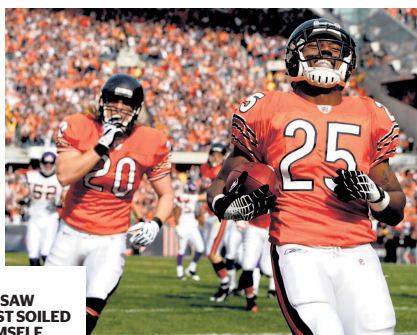

Minnesota's Chris Kluwe illegally kicks the football away from the Bears on Sunday after Craig Steltz blocked his punt attempt. Garrett Wolfe recovered the ball and ran for a touchdown.

Monster mash

Clad in their jack-o'-lantern orange uniforms, the Bears embraced the Halloween season Sunday by taking advantage of a number of big plays that were, well, downright creepy. Here is a rundown of the black-cat moments—and their rankings on a scale of fright—that made the hair on our necks stand on end. MICHAEL HINES FOR REDEYE

JIM PRISCHING/TRIBUNE

First quarter

Second quarter

THE PLAY On a punt, Vikings return man Charles Gordon lets the football bounce, and the pigskin takes a supernatural bounce to ricochet off his arm. THE RESULT Zack Bowman, who was promoted from the practice squad just last week, recovers the live ball in the end zone to give the Bears a 24-17 lead.

THE PLAY

Minnesota's Fred Evans makes a monstrous mistake when he jumps offside as Robbie Gould lines up for a career-long 53-yard field goal.

THE RESULT The Bears move up 5 yards, and Gould nails a 48-yarder for a 27-24 halftime lead.

THAT DID NOT JUST HAPPEN!

OK, THIS IS GETTING SPOOKY.

SOLDIER FIELD IS HAUNTED!

JIGSAW JUST SOILED HIMSELF.

OVERHEARD ON TWITTER

If you haven't seen what RedEye is doing on Twitter, you are missing out. Now you can interact with the editors and have your comments printed. Here's an example: On Sunday, we asked, "Who is the MVP of Sunday's game and what was the key play?" Want your say? Sign up at twitter.com/redeyechicago.

wkdown Captain Neckbeard and the special teams get my vote for MVP. Very impressed by the secondary secondary!

AREalist All 3 rookies on defense, they all made key plays!!!

djpillsburyd Having not watched the game since I'm out of state, I'm gonna go ahead and say Orton.

CANINE HOTLINE

The Bears have a bye next week, so what better time to assess their season than now? Are the Bears better or worse than you thought they would be? What do you see them doing the rest of the season? Send Whizzer your thoughts to redeyesports@tribune.com or just text "whlz" and your comment to 47383.

Change we can believe in

1 If you haven't noticed, things have looked a little different around here recently. I've expanded my empire in RedEye sports while appearing in this column once a week. Barack Obama has inspired me to change.

Points taken

2 I had trouble finding the Bears game on TV in the second half. I saw this one team with 48 points in the fourth quarter, but that couldn't have been our Bears.

What if?

3 Imagine how things might have been different if Lovie Smith hadn't been programmed to say "Rex is our starting quarterback" all those years.

48's enough

4 The Bears last scored 48 points in 1986. The Ditka years. Enough said.

Exposed

5 The Patriots are nothing without QB Tom Brady, and the Cowboys are nothing without Tony Romo. Kind of puts Chicago's QB situation in perspective, doesn't it?

Misery loves company

6 It's only preseason, but the Bulls are 1-4. And I thought with the Cubs and White Sox done, there'd be a shortage of disappointment in this city.

Ray of fright

7 Hard to believe the Tampa Bay Rays once had a 3-1 series lead over the Boston Red Sox. Guess they were trying to make us Cub and Sox fans feel better.

LOL at BCS

8 College football's first BCS rankings were released Sunday. The sound you just heard was the nation's collective yawn.

Cat power

9 It pains me, but I must give credit to the felines of Northwestern. The Wildcats look like the real thing. I can't believe I said that.

Bowman

WANNA TREAT?

Bears cornerback Zack Bowman. First NFL game. First NFL interception. First NFL touchdown. Welcome to the big leagues.

Third quarter

THE PLAY Desmond Clark (left) catches a pass and fumbles at the goal line on a ghoulish hit by Cedric Griffin.

THE RESULT Rashied Davis recovers the ball in the end zone to give the Bears a 10-point lead.

Fourth quarter

THE PLAY

Like a vampire in the night, Bowman intercepts a pass from Minnesota quarterback Gus Frerotte with 40 seconds left in the game.

THE RESULT In his pro debut, the rookie out of Nebraska salts away the victory.

THE PLAY

Orton, that devilish quarterback, kneels to run out the game clock.

THE RESULT The team finishes with 48 points, the most for the club since the Bears beat Tampa Bay 48-14 at home on Dec. 7, 1986.

Elliott Serrano's "Geek to Me" blog is tackling RedEye's latest tourney: Best Video Game ever at weblogs.redeyechicago.com/geektome/

TOPIC	SCOTT KLEINBERG skleinberg@tribune.com	ELLIOTT SERRANO redeyesports@tribune.com	BRIAN MOORE brmoore@tribune.com	JIMMY GREENFIELD jgreenfield@tribune.com	STICK FIGURE redeyesports@tribune.com
1 Kyle Orton is to the Bears as ...	... for today anyway, as Superman is to Metropolis.	... Ringo Starr is to the Beatles, except he doesn't burn his fan mail.	... Britney Spears is to the L.A.-area legal system.	... Rex Grossman is to getting water for any Bear who is thirsty.	... Jimmy is to bourbon and hookers.
2 What were you doing the last time the Bears scored 48 points (1986)?	I don't remember what I had for breakfast. You want me to remember that?	Trying to score for the first time, but she gave new meaning to the term "goal-line stand."	Pegging my jeans and growing out my mullet.	Combing my hair.	Doing the "Super Bowl Shuffle."
3 When I saw the Bears had scored almost 50 points, I ...	... figured someone working the graphics on Fox screwed up.	... looked outside to see if the Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse were in my driveway.	... wondered how the Bears have gone from fantasy black hole to fantasy juggernaut.	... wished I hadn't left the game at halftime.	... moved them up my list of best bears. Now they're between Yogi and Teddy.
4 Least inspiring right now: Bulls or Blackhawks?	Blackhawks. They are on thin ice.	Depends: Unless Vinny Del Negro gets fired a week into the season, then it's the Hawks.	Bulls. Even with Derrick Rose, I'm expecting the worst.	The Blackhawks, but only because it's the real thing.	I now understand animal rights people. Why pick on defenseless beings?
5 Todd Palin attended Sunday's NASCAR race. Imagine his thoughts.	"Man, this is just like my wife! Always going around in circles!"	"If I wanted to see pregnant women with guns, I would've gone to 'SNL' with the wife."	"If John McCain were here, he'd be asleep by the third lap."	"I really think I've got a shot with Tina Fey."	"Imagine there's no heaven ..." David Archuleta is a genius.

Dud of the week Drew Brees

The New Orleans quarterback came down to earth Sunday, passing for 231 yards with no touchdowns and one interception in the Saints' 30-7 loss to the Panthers.

Stud of the week LenDale White

The engine of the Titans' running game scored three touchdowns and ran for 149 yards as Tennessee topped the Kansas City Chiefs 34-10.

Thud of the week Reggie Bush

New Orleans' multipurpose threat went down with a knee injury in the Saints' loss. The Saints believe Bush has injured the meniscus in his left knee and won't be able to play San Diego in Wembley Stadium next week.

BLACKHAWKS 4, CANUCKS 2

'Hawks lookin' Sharp

Patrick Sharp had two goals and an assist and the Blackhawks won for the first time under new coach Joel Quenneville, beating the Vancouver Canucks 4-2 on Sunday night.

Quenneville took over behind the bench on Thursday after Denis Savard was fired after a 1-2-1 start. On Saturday night in St. Louis in Quenneville's first game, the Blackhawks blew a 3-1 lead and lost 4-3 in a shootout.

Patrick Kane added a goal and two assists, Brent Seabrook also scored, and Cristobal Huet made 28 saves for his first victory with the Blackhawks. Pavol Demitra and Henrik Sedin scored for the Canucks, and Roberto Luongo made 22 saves.

Demitra opened the scoring midway through the first period. He connected from just in front of the crease after taking a centering pass from Mason Raymond after a turnover by the Blackhawks' Aaron Johnson behind the net.

Seabrook tied it just over a minute later on a shot from the top of the right circle that sailed over Luongo's glove. Kane set up the goal with a pass from behind the Vancouver net.

Sharp was credited with a power-play goal that gave the Blackhawks a 2-1 lead with 4:29 left in the first. Sharp tried to center the puck to Kris Versteeg, but the hard pass deflected off Vancouver defenseman Mattias Ohlund's stick and past Luongo.

Kane's power-play goal at 6:58 of the third made it 3-1. He stuffed in a rebound of Sharp's shot from the slot after the Blackhawks' Dustin Byfuglien failed to convert an initial rebound.

Sharp made it 4-1 with 6:45 left in the third when his shot hit the post and then deflected in off Luongo. Just under 2 minutes later, Sedin cut it to 4-2 when his shot deflected in off the stick of Chicago's Duncan Keith.

Patrick Sharp celebrates on Sunday after scoring a goal in the third period that gave Chicago a 4-1 lead over Vancouver. He finished with two goals and an assist. NUCCIO DINUZZO/TRIBUNE

I've got a beef with "Monday Night Football." I still watch it, but it seems to have lost the aura of importance now that it is on ESPN. ABC used to turn it into an event. For ESPN, it's just another televised sporting event on a 24-7 sports channel. When ABC handled "MNF," it stood out like boxing would on the Women's Entertainment network. Not that women can't appreciate boxing, but I digress. Here now, my picks.

Better by the dozen?

As cupcake spots reach critical mass, some get a frosty reception

reader reviews

METROMIX.COM

What do you think?

Which spots really take the cake? Post your own review at metromix.com

A few years back, Chicago saw a rush of cupcake spots—notably Cupcakes and Swirlz—hoping to capitalize on the success of the cupcake mania kicked off by New York’s Magnolia Bakery. The past year brought a second wave of sweet spots, including two recent arrivals, More and Chaos Theory, that even throw savory ingredients into the mix. Has Chicago had enough, or is our appetite insatiable? Here’s what readers are saying about this year’s crop of cupcakes.

More

1 E. DELAWARE PL. 312-951-0001

This Gold Coast spot opened to much fanfare in mid-September, thanks in part to the fact that Chicago pastry icon Gale Gand consulted on some of the recipes. Offbeat flavors such as salted caramel, fig-port-blue cheese and BLT (yep, like the sandwich) have been drawing curious patrons, but does it live up to the hype?

“The bacon-maple cupcake is wonderful. ... The chocolate ranks among the best I have ever eaten. The store is beautiful and the staff friendly and generous with samples!” —Sammy from River North

“I bought two cupcakes: BLT and chocolate-strawberry. ... The BLT was definitely worth the trip but the chocolate-strawberry tasted average. Overall, I still like Cupcakes [613 W. Briar Pl.] the best.” —Kat from Gold Coast

“This place rocks! Hands down, the best cupcakes in the city! I tried five in total. ... I found each one of them exquisite. All of the cakes were moist and delicious, and the frostings perfectly complemented the cakes. ... The staff was incredibly friendly and attentive.” —Jill from Gold Coast

Molly's Cupcakes

2536 N. CLARK ST. 773-883-7220

Open since December, this Lincoln Park spot sets itself apart with an on-the-spot DIY option: You select the cake and frosting flavors, then take your just-frosted creation to the sprinkles bar to add your own flourishes.

“We had the red velvet cupcake with the cream cheese frosting and the Ron Bennington, a chocolate cupcake with a peanut butter filling. ... These cupcakes were so moist and yummy! ... Yes, they are a bit pricey, but ... if you think of these cupcakes as a once-in-a-while treat, then $3.75 shouldn't be so bad.” —Rachella from Lincoln Park

Cakes from Molly's Cupcakes, More and Chaos Theory

“I wanted to love this place because it’s around the corner for me, but the cupcakes are dry or something—the cake part is just blah. The icing is so disappointing. I’ve tried going back three times, each time hoping to think differently. But nope, I’m done.” —bayla1028 from Wicker Park/East Village

Chaos Theory Cake and Confections

2961 N. LINCOLN AVE. 773-281-2353

Michelle Garcia (Bleeding Heart Bakery) opened this Lakeview pastry shop with playful decor and even more playful flavor combos in August. Garcia’s creative treats definitely don’t stop at cupcakes—you’ll find cakes, tarts and more—but cupcakes have generated the most buzz at metromix.com.

“Chaos Theory blew me away. The cupcakes were fresh with good crumb, the hazelnut mousse cake was mouth-watering, and the chocolate-dipped bacon is probably the most wonderful thing I have ever eaten. My hat’s off to this place.” —Pink Dahlia from Ukrainian Village

“The flavors sound really ingenious but the cake itself is dry and tough. The icing is heavy, especially the chocolate varieties. They’re $3.75 each—I think that’s a little high. The sign tells you that they’re completely organic, so I don’t mind paying more, but these just aren’t very good.” —Katie K. from Lakeview

Fall for you

Sola, 3868 N. Lincoln Ave. (entrance on Byron Street) 773-327-3868.

One of our favorite things about fall? Hearty eats. At the Autumn Beer Dinner, Sola chef Carol Wallack and chef de cuisine Alex Shalev prepare five courses highlighting seasonal produce from local farmers. Dine on pumpkin and soba gnocchi with mushrooms, poached leeks and truffles; and bacon-wrapped pork tenderloin and braised cheek with Chinese broccoli and pineapple-beet puree. Pairings from Two Brothers and Allagash breweries round out the meal. 6:30 p.m. $65.

Cirque-le of love

Kerasotes City North 14, 2600 N. Western Ave. 800-326-3264.

Get a behind-the-scenes peek at Cirque du Soleil's Las Vegas-based show "LOVE," set to music by The Beatles, during a screening of "All Together Now," a documentary by Adrian Wills. The flick screens nationwide in 150 theaters for one night only and includes interviews with Paul McCartney, Ringo Starr, Olivia Harrison, Yoko Ono, Sir George Martin and others. 7 p.m. $7.50-$10.50.

Drama in numbers

Bailiwick Arts Center, 1229 W. Belmont Ave. 773-883-1090.

Take 10 one-act scripts utilizing a stripped-down set of one table and two chairs, add in 10 local directors, finish off with 10 sets of acting duos and what do you get? The n.u.f.a.n. ensemble's annual Table and Chairs: Duets festival of humorous and dramatic short plays by emerging and established playwrights. 8 p.m. Through Tuesday. $10.

Ode to Oprah

Gorilla Tango Theatre, 1919 N. Milwaukee Ave. 773-598-4549.

Whether you're amused or horrified when relatives reveal TMI at family get-togethers, don't miss "Auntie Dorris' You May Not Wanna Know But I'm Gonna Tell You Anyway-athon," a solo show starring local performance artist Zoe Schwartz, who portrays an 80-year-old former showgirl through a trio of disparate characters, including an aging lounge singer, a cockney shoe shiner and Oprah Winfrey. 9:30 p.m. Through Thursday. $10.

Rio is grand

Carnivale, 702 W. Fulton St. 312-850-5005.

Temps are dropping north of the equator, but you can channel in some South American heat via Brazilian cocktails at mixologist Victor Beheza's hands-on Caipirinhas 101 class. Muddle your own traditional and pineapple-basil caipirinhas, then sample the results with appetizers such as ropa vieja and guacamole. 6:30 p.m. $25.

Lucinda Williams hits her stride

Associated Press

From the false start on the opening rocker "Real Love" to the fade-out of AC/DC cover "It's a Long Way to the Top," anyone familiar with Lucinda Williams may notice something unusual while listening to her latest disc, "Little Honey."

You'll catch yourself smiling a lot—laughing, even. On balance, it contains some of the most joyful music of her career—this from a woman with a song "Joy" that rages about the loss of it.

"It basically does reflect my life," she said. "Personally, professionally and creatively, I'm in the best place I've ever been, at least in my adult life."

Williams, 55, smiled like a flustered teenager onstage recently while mentioning her fiancé/manager Tom Overby's 50th birthday. She sang the new "Honey Bee" for him, describing the extended sexual metaphor as her favorite song to perform now. "Honey Bee" and "Real Love" are straight-ahead rockers destined to be mainstays in her live set for years.

Her father Miller Williams, a poet and his daughter's literary mentor, once said that there is a pitch-black well, and everyone stands at its edge. Some fall in, and some don't.

"I loved that image," she said. "It made so much sense to me. And I've seen it happen time and time again. ... That's what my writing deals with a lot—what makes someone stand at the edge and jump in and what makes some of us not."

That's plain in older songs like "Drunken Angel" and "2 Kool 2 Be 4-gotten." Williams seemed like someone who worked best when her life was a mess.

"That's the oldest myth around, and I bought into it," she said. "We all did when we were starting out. I don't think I really thought of it on a conscious level. That's just part of being young and going through the muck and mire that you have to go through. I wasn't consciously making myself miserable so I could write songs. Maybe on some subliminal level I was, I don't know. Who knows? I guess I would have to undergo psychiatric evaluation to find out."

She and Overby, a longtime music industry executive, have been together more than three years. After years without it, Williams is delighted to be in a stable relationship with a stable guy.

"I had to get over my bad-boy thing," she said. "Now I realize that all men have some bad boy. You just have to find it."

Overby mildly protests: "I was not exactly wearing a pocket protector."

SR. NETWORK ENGINEER-ARCHITECT

Tribune Company is currently searching for a CCIE (Cisco Certified Internetwork Expert) to serve as the Sr. Network Engineer/Architect; responsible for high-level network planning, design, and optimization. The qualified candidate must have experience developing strategies and direction for network systems solutions using current and emerging technologies. The Ideal candidate will have completed both written and lab work associated with certification. The Sr. Network Engineer/Architect will work closely with Sr. Management in order to properly design and support Tribune Company Network strategy, research, development, deployment, monitoring and support systems.

JOB RESPONSIBILITIES

- To take a leadership role in defining the overall network architecture of the Tribune Company
- To maintain and/or increase understanding and proficiency in new technologies and disciplines so that potential technologies can be identified, recommended and implemented.
- Act as a consultant to other departments and translate their business requirements into network design and support plans (meetings, design assistance, support, working with cost and budgeting on projects).
- Development and design of highly available, tightly integrated, secure, flexible, and fault tolerant networking systems.
- Assist in creating and developing formal guidelines and policies to ensure appropriate network systems support and designs.
- Approves and modifies network design and architecture to ensure compliance with HIPPA, SOX and PCI regulations.
- To provide overall guidance and direction with regard to computer security including prevention and coordinating responses to security incidents
- Monitors network performance, ensures capacity planning is performed, and is proactive in assessing and making recommendations for improvement
- Performs troubleshooting procedures and designs resolution strategy and documentation as needed to hand off to operational staff.
- Ability to execute in a methodical manner to gather, document, and present specific customer requirements
- To share technical expertise with less experienced staff; to train, technically develop, and mentor.
- Configure and maintains firewalls, routers, switches, and other devices for the network systems

JOB REQUIREMENTS

- 7+ years experience with LAN and WAN architectures and technologies.
- CCIE certification and/or Bachelor's degree in Network, Computer, Electrical Engineering, Computer Science or Related Field.
- Demonstrable understanding in OSI Network model and the following network related services and protocols including: TFTP, FTP, DNS, DHCP, NTP, SMTP, SYSLOG, MPLS, BGP, EIGRP, OSPF, multicast, policy-based routing, ether-channel, QoS, traffic-shaping, load balancing, etc.
- Effective experience in documentation to clearly articulate technical designs, issues constraints, procedures, etc.
- Must be available 24 hours/day, 7 days/week on an emergency basis for troubleshooting.
- Must be able to participate in occasional travel to other Tribune business units, vendors, or client sites.
- Experience with enterprise class network management/monitoring systems is a plus
- Understanding of operating system fundamentals (UNIX, Linux, Windows, etc.) is a plus
- Communication skills (especially technical writing skills) an unrelenting customer focus, client need analysis, problem solving, multi tasking, strong interpersonal skills, risk taking, documentation of operational issues and solutions, team player, mentoring and transfer of knowledge, project management skills.

Google's cure for drunken e-mails

By Ryan Smith
FOR REDEYE

"Hey gurl im sorry 4 what i siad earlier, i didn mean taht, u wanna come over and makeout plz?"

That's the kind of alcohol-soaked e-mail someone might send late on a Friday night, after the taxi has taken him home from a hot date that didn't go so well.

Could it be you, perhaps? You've had one too many Old Styles and you let fly a poorly typed message you probably will end up regretting the next day.

If you're the type of person who "tipsy types," you might want to check out Google's "Mail Goggles," a new test-phase feature in the free Gmail Lab service that could save you from looking like a complete idiot.

The Mail Goggles name comes from the slang phrase "beer goggles," which is the effect of alcohol on one's ability to discern the true nature of that "hottie" across the room at the bar.

The program kicks in at the time previously set by the user. If it's not set individually, it will default to be on from 10 p.m. to 4 a.m. on Friday and Saturday nights. When the user tries to send an e-mail in the time period you ask, the program presents five math problems on the screen. The user then has a limited period of time to solve the problems. If he or she can answer the questions, presumably the person is sober enough to confess their love to an acquaintance.

Of course, if you're the type who can solve basic math problems even when you can't walk a straight line, there's an option to increase the difficulty of the questions—

Mail Goggles

It's that time of day. Gmail aims to help you in many ways. Are you sure you want to send this? Answer some simple math problems to verify.

69 - 38 =

11 x 2 =

37 + 19 =

2 x 5 =

48 - 38 =

43 seconds

STOP THE MADNESS

If you use Gmail, the new Mail Goggles (above) service might prevent sending these regrettable drink-induced e-mails.

- » The one to the random guy/girl you met at a bar the week before. ("Who the hell is Ben, and why did he e-mail me at 3 a.m. saying, 'hey u want to houkup toniegt/?'")
- » A whiny confession to your ex-girlfriend/boyfriend that you will always love them and want to get back together immediately. ("I luv u 4ever honey!")
- » An angry message to your boss telling them off for something that happened at work earlier that day. ("Dude, WTF didnt i get my promotioonn??")
- » Drunken anti-CTA related rants sent to RedEye. ("God, the CTA sux!!! Wheres my bus?!!?") R.S.

though they never get as difficult as college algebra or calculus.

To activate Mail Goggles, go into Gmail's Settings tab, and turn on Mail Goggles in the "Labs" tab. Then adjust how and when it works in the "General" tab.

Now if only Google could somehow find a way to block the drunken text message, today's high-tech booty call could be eliminated.

Banding together

The Fresno Bee

You can't say Nicole Sullivan hasn't tried to find a place on the prime-time TV schedule.

Since leaving the Saturday late-night comedy series "MADtv" in 2005, Sullivan has starred in multiple episodes of "King of Queens," "Raines," "Scrubs" and "Hot Properties." And there were several shows that never even made it on air.

She makes another attempt to find a TV home Monday as the star of the new Lifetime comedy "Rita Rocks." Sullivan plays the mother of two who finally decides to take some time for herself. She starts a garage band.

Sullivan is confident about this show.

"It feels like the first time it's been a really perfect match, to be honest," Sullivan said during an interview in July at the Beverly Hilton Hotel. "You do the 'MADtv' stuff for so many years, which was so fun but requires a certain kind of energy that I don't have in these years. ...

"This was the first time I've seen the opportunity where the character was smart enough and alive enough that I could put in all of my dumb bits that I love to do and all that. But it was so grounded in reality."

One problem, however: Rita plays a guitar. Sullivan plays four musical instruments—but not guitar. She jokes that Lifetime thought a series about a woman who plays the oboe wouldn't be that interesting. So she is taking guitar lessons.

Sullivan, who has a 13-month-old son, thinks that makes her better equipped now to handle a role as the mother of two girls.

"You grow up and you think you understand what it's like to be a parent. But you really don't until the instant you are one.

"I remember reading a script and just sort of going, 'Oh, I totally get it.' You're part of a club, and it's called being a mom," Sullivan said. "And it is crazy, awesome, amazing."

Rita Rocks

7:30 p.m. every night this week, Lifetime
(moves to its regular time slot at 7:30 p.m. Tuesdays on Oct. 28)

The scoop: "MADtv" vet Nicole Sullivan plays Rita Clemens, an overworked wife and mom who wants to recapture her past as a guitarist in a Bangles tribute band. She starts jamming with her postal carrier Patty (Tisha Campbell-Martin), an unemployed neighbor, Owen (Ian Gomez), and her daughter's slacker boyfriend Kip (Raviv Ullman).

What works: Sullivan and Campbell-Martin have decent voices and appealing personalities, but this unfunny half hour is tone deaf.

What doesn't: Aside from the "Rocks" part, "Rita Rocks" is a conventional family sitcom. We've seen it all before: Rita fights with her daughter (Natalie Dreyfuss), argues and makes up with her hubby (Richard Ruccolo), tries to play matchmaker for Patty.

Tune in or out? Ultimately, "Rita Rocks" plays a tired old tune.

>> Nicole Richie leaves Paris behind with Monday's "Chuck." For more, go to redeye.chicago.com/showpatrol.

Pretty in pink

Buy these products and donate to breast cancer research

Associated Press

Breast Cancer Awareness Month—October—means an influx of pink products that help raise money for charity. There are many worthy and worthwhile choices out there, but The Breast Cancer Research Foundation suggests consumers put at the top of their list the products that name their specific cause and donation amount. Here are some choices:

Jo Malone Red Roses Cologne

Saks Cure T-shirt

Avon pink clogs

ESTEE LAUDER

Many of the brands under the Estee Lauder corporate umbrella offer fundraising products for the BCRF:

» The Estee Lauder brand is giving $500,000 in connection with the sale of its Pink Ribbon Collection, including a jeweled pin and Elizabeth Hurley lipsticks and gloss.

» Clinique's Dramatically Different Moisturizing Lotion will donate $10 from each $35 bottle.

» Aveda is giving $4 from each $21 tube of Hand Relief lotion.

» Bumble and Bumble will give $1 from each can of Classic Hairspray.

» Donna Karan Cosmetics is making a $15,000 contribution from the sales of a limited-edition Cashmere Mist Eau de Toilette spray.

» Jo Malone is donating $15,000 from its Red Roses Cologne.

SAKS FIFTH AVENUE

The chain's Key to the Cure T-shirt is designed by Karl Lagerfeld. For each arrow-motif shirt sold in stores or on saks.com, $35 of the $40 price tag is donated to the Entertainment Industry Foundation's Women's Cancer Research Fund.

FORD MOTOR

The car company offers a Warriors in Pink package for its V-6 Mustang coupes and convertibles that includes pink rocker-tape striping, pink stitching and a pink-ribbon badge under the pony ornament. For each of these packages, $500 will go to Susan G. Komen for the Cure. Ford also has a complementary line of clothing and accessories, which donates 100 percent of net proceeds.

JUDITH RIPKA

Judith Ripka will donate 10 percent of the sale price of every $350 silver-and-gold Athena bracelet with diamonds and pink crystals, with a guaranteed minimum contribution of $5,000, to Susan G. Komen.

WHITE HOUSE / BLACK MARKET

The company has a dedicated line called Give Hope Collection. All net proceeds, up to $200,000, from the pink-trimmed styles will go to Living Beyond Breast Cancer.

AVON

Avon's Breast Cancer Crusade offerings are numerous—and inexpensive—with all products priced under $15. Some of the highlights, which benefit The Avon Foundation, include an $8 bubble bath, with a $7.07 donation for each unit sold; a silver-tone tennis bracelet with rose crystals and an enamel-like pink ribbon, with a $3.36 donation for each $5 bracelet; and faux shearling-lined pink clogs, which give a $2 donation for each $15 pair.

C.O. BIGELOW

The apothecary will donate $250,000 to the Breast Cancer Research Foundation while offering a $29.50 Cancer Vixen Kit that includes lemon-cream body moisturizer, body wash, lip tint in a "pink mint" flavor, a cooling foot cream and quince hand lotion.

AMERICAN GREETINGS

The plush Care Bears Pink Power Bear by American Greetings, with its message of caring and sharing, wears a pink bracelet. It's sold at Target for $19.99, with $1 of each purchase going toward BCRF.

OTHERS

» Bobby Jones' half-zip mock turtleneck in pink is donating 20 percent of the $145 purchase price to The BCRF. This program will run through July 2009.

» Splendid's $42 pink, polka-dot tank top sends $5 to The BCRF.

» Outerwear brand Mackage is giving $100 to The BCRF with each sale of its asymmetrical-zip Hope coat, made of black wool with leather trim.

» Philosophy has pledged a minimum donation of $10,000 from the sale of $20 bottles of She Colors My Day bubble bath to the EIF Women's Cancer Research Fund.

» From each $32 set of Kate's Paperie Gianna Rose Atelier Scented Soaps, $4 will be donated to the Triple Negative Breast Cancer Foundation.

romance planet

for Oct. 20-26

JENNIFER SHEPHERD
read more @
lipstickmystic.com

Scorpio
Oct. 24-Nov. 21

You're in one of those moods where your partner can do nothing right because you're so much smarter than him or her. How wonderful it is that you know everything. How could your lover fail to appreciate your brilliance? The moon says get a grip.

Sagittarius
Nov. 22-Dec. 21

You thought you knew what you wanted, but now you're not so sure. You dreamed of marrying a cowboy, but now you want to wed a rocket scientist. You fantasized about sleeping with a cheerleader, but now you want the girl next door. Venus says change is good.

Capricorn
Dec. 22-Jan. 19

Someone sexy will surprise you with his or her passion, courtesy of a sensual moon. Maybe a platonic friend will ask you to date him or an aloof business colleague will beg you to pleasure her. Hmm. Suddenly things are looking interesting.

Aquarius
Jan. 20-Feb. 18

A moon opposition could have you sucking your thumb, feeling sorry for yourself. Why can't you ever find somebody cool to date? Why doesn't your current honey understand you? Waaaah! Fortunately, this childlike tantrum will soon pass.

Pisces
Feb. 19-March 20

You've been in a domestic mood lately, wanting to play house with your honey. Unfortunately, things didn't work out that well. Saturn is stirring up some melodrama. But before you toss his underwear out on the curb or take her puppy to the pound, chill out.

Aries
March 21-April 19

You're in one of your exhibitionist moods. You'll engage in some steamy public displays of affection. Or you'll shout to the four winds that you're in love with a certain someone. The moon is turning you into a lusty loony.

Taurus
April 20-May 20

Try not to be such a perfectionist. Your honey has some cellulite or your guy has some crow's feet around his eyes. So what? Remember, life isn't meant to be Photoshopped. Saturn is reminding you to embrace reality, warts and all.

Gemini
May 21-June 21

As Mercury goes direct, you'll feel cheerier about love than you have in weeks. No longer are you sobbing silently into a martini every night. Instead, you're flirting with cute strangers and being more social than ever.

Cancer
June 22-July 22

Work is driving you bonkers. Stop trying to figure out what you want to be when you grow up. Focus on your friends and fun stuff instead. The moon is telling you to go to every party you can find and hang out with people who make you smile.

Leo
July 23-Aug. 22

Spunky Venus is inspiring you to take a risk. You'll show up at the office wearing a miniskirt and no panties. You'll turn up at your girlfriend's gym wearing a tight mesh muscle tee-shirt. Wherever you go, you'll attract attention.

Virgo
Aug. 23-Sept. 22

You like to give, but you also like to receive. Saturn has you in the mood to take, take, take. You'll demand lots of sensual attention from your honey of the moment. You're craving a sex slave, and you want one now.

We're doing research to help find the answer!

A research study is currently enrolling in your area to determine if adding a medication to standard cholesterol therapy can slow the progression of plaque build-up in the arteries. Plaque build-up has been proven to increase the risk for heart disease. If you have high cholesterol, are taking a cholesterol medication, or have a history of heart disease, you may qualify for this study. Compensation for travel may be available to those who qualify.

Did you see President Bush host “Saturday Night Live” this weekend?

OK, so it wasn’t really Bush, but Josh Brolin, who plays the commander in chief in Oliver Stone’s new biopic “W.,” wasn’t far off with his impersonation of the president.

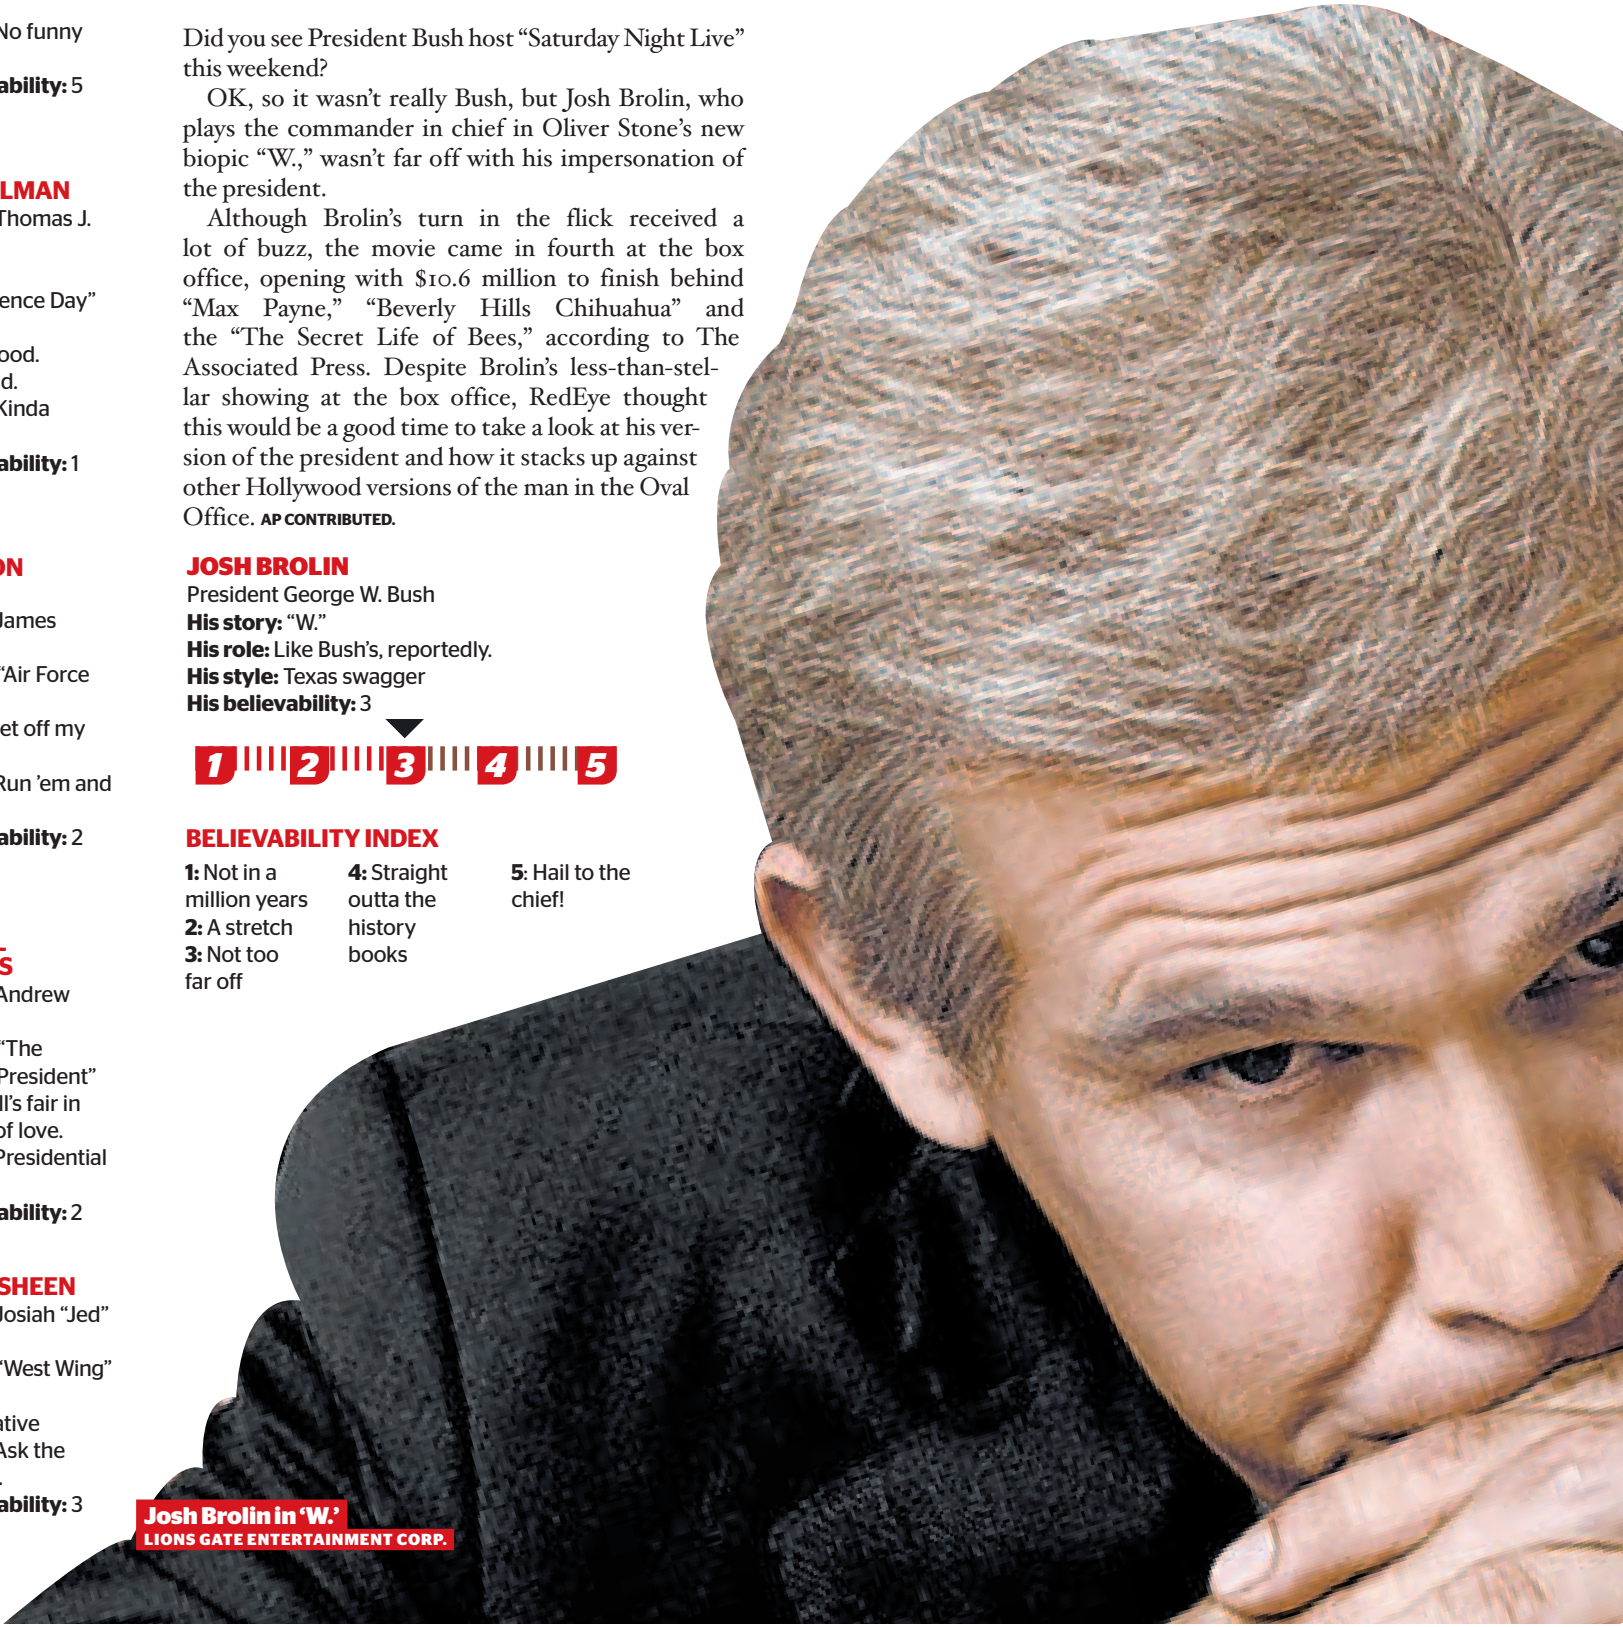

Although Brolin’s turn in the flick received a lot of buzz, the movie came in fourth at the box office, opening with $10.6 million to finish behind “Max Payne,” “Beverly Hills Chihuahua” and the “The Secret Life of Bees,” according to The Associated Press. Despite Brolin’s less-than-stellar showing at the box office, RedEye thought this would be a good time to take a look at his version of the president and how it stacks up against other Hollywood versions of the man in the Oval Office. AP CONTRIBUTED.

JOSH BROLIN
President George W. Bush
His story: “W.”
His role: Like Bush’s, reportedly.

Not so fast!

It's not over until it's over, Madonna's rep says. The singer's divorce settlement with her estranged husband Guy Ritchie has yet to be finalized, the rep told The Associated Press on Sunday. "I will not be commenting on the various reports regarding the divorce or of the settlement which has not been finalized," publicist Liz Rosenberg said in an e-mail to the AP. Madonna and Ritchie married in December 2000 at a castle in Scotland. The couple are reportedly worth around $525 million.

Barker recovering

Travis Barker was released Friday from the L.A. burn center where he was being treated after surviving a plane crash, The Associated Press reports. The former Blink-182 drummer had been there since Sept. 29 with second- and third-degree burns. The burn center says he is expected to fully recover over the next few months.

No-no to solo

She's one of three remaining members of Danity Kane, but Dawn Richard says any rumors that she's thinking about a solo act are false. "It's so interesting how the media chooses to interpret or report things," she tells mtv.com. "I have never said that I was pursuing a solo deal. ... I'm not sidestepping."

THE VELVET ROPE

Bring the Wayne

It's Wayne's world, and we're all just living in it.

While accepting the Lyricist of the Year award (above) during the taping of the BET Hip-Hop Awards, Lil Wayne said Saturday that he's going to be a daddy: He said he has a son about to be born "any day now," according to video on mtv.com.

The New Orleans rapper, who was up for 12 awards, also beat out Jay-Z, DJ Khaled, T.I. and Kanye West for the MVP of the Year award during the ceremony in Atlanta. The show, hosted by T-Pain, will air Thursday.

'High School' party

America's favorite twentysomething high schooler celebrated his 21st birthday Saturday—and it was, like, super nice.

Zac Efron's "High School Musical" co-star and girlfriend, Vanessa

Efron

Hudgens, told "Access Hollywood" her beau's celebrations would be low-key.

"We are laid-back people," she said.

According to People magazine, Efron celebrated with a dinner party at an L.A. restaurant with family and friends, including Hudgens and other "HSM" co-stars.

They were all in it together!

Spidey drama

What's a "Spider-Man" movie without Kirsten Dunst?

That's the question mtv.com is asking after reporting that franchise director Sam Raimi and star Tobey Maguire have signed on for more wall-crawling entertainment.

"Kirsten, I'd love to work with her again," Raimi told the network last week. "I hope she'll be written into it. I couldn't imagine making one without her, and I think she's an important part of the movies."

Stay tuned

Call it the Sarah Palin effect.

"Saturday Night Live" scored its highest ratings in 14 years this weekend when the Alaska governor made two brief, highly anticipated appearances on the NBC show.

Nielsen Media Research won't have a complete count of Saturday's audience until later in the week, The Associated Press reports, but it will likely be around 14 million people—and 17 million for the first half hour, when the opening skit happened.

At one point in the show, the GOP vice presidential hopeful watched with executive producer Lorne Michaels as Tina Fey impersonated her (above). At another, she put her hands up as Amy Poehler recited a "hard-core" rap about the election.

THE DIGIT

$18 million

That's how much Mark Wahlberg's "Max Payne" was able to scare up at the box office this weekend, making it the No. 1 flick in theaters.

Doggone it!

"Max Payne" knocked off Disney's "Beverly Hills Chihuahua" from the top spot with its video-game sensibilities. How long had the dog movie held on to the No. 1 spot? Text "dog" and the number of your answer to 47383. You'll get a message telling you if you're right.
